Portfolio Manager's Commentary

Your fund was down 5.39% in September.

September was certainly one of the most difficult months for equity markets in recent memory. Continued liquidation as well as renewed financial concerns contributed to the S&P/TSX Index declining 14.45% in the month. Small cap stocks were particularly hard hit, falling 19.72% in the month.

Despite the very difficult backdrop we managed to do well, certainly on a relative basis. As we mentioned last month, we were defensively positioned as we entered the month of September, being only 35% net long. As the month progressed, we continued to trim our long positions and add to some of our short positions as our screening process continued to urge caution. This proved fortuitous and helped us pare our losses in the month.

As we enter October we are very defensively positioned. Currently we are only 4% net long and we are focused on larger, more liquid stocks as small and micro cap stocks continue to be under considerable pressure. We currently have very limited exposure to the commodity sectors, as we continue to feel that this area of the market will take a considerable amount of time to regain its leadership given the significant damage we have seen in commodity prices as well as commodity stocks. Our intention is to remain extremely patient before returning to the commodity sectors despite some very compelling values.

Our focus in the near term is to remain in more defensive names (e.g. L(T), SAP(T), MCD(N), GIS(N)) until equity markets stabilize. For the foreseeable future we intend to remain near neutral from a net equity market exposure point of view. As we've stated in our last few notes, now is not a time to be aggressive.

Given the very difficult equity market backdrop we have experienced for most of the 18 months since our launch we thought we would again highlight our performance (see Table A). We have significantly outperformed our benchmark in all relevant periods. We have also managed to avoid significant losses in this very difficult market by adhering to our disciplined approach in realizing losses quickly, and not averaging down losing positions. We intend to maintain this discipline.

Once again we say thank you to our clients and friends for their continued support. We remind you during these difficult markets that we remain focused on the preservation of your capital and we'll remain patient and liquid until the current market volatility subsides.

Tony
