Fund Description

The Rival North American Growth Fund's primary objective is to deliver positive absolute returns in all market environments. The Investment Manager intends to meet this objective primarily through investing from both a long and short perspective in small and mid cap North American equities. The portfolio will normally be relatively concentrated and is not expected to exceed 30 long and 30 short positions. The investment team will vary the allocation of long and short positions and sector weightings as deemed appropriate based on the Manager's macro environment analysis. The Manager employs a rigorous technical and fundamental approach to security selection.

Your fund was down 5.69% in September.

Equity markets continued to lose significant ground in September with the TSX declining 8.66% and the S&P 500 down 7.03%. Volatility continued at a heightened level throughout the month as investors struggled with the concern of Europe's intensifying debt crisis and if it will lead to the second global recession in three years. Small cap stocks bore the brunt of the decline as evidenced by the 14.93% decline in the S&P/TSX SmallCap Index and the 18.98% decline in the S&P/TSX Venture Index. The VIX, a measure of market volatility, moved above 40 in September. This is a level that has rarely been reached over the past 20 years. It all points to continued market uncertainty and thus a very defensive stance in your portfolio.

Although the fund posted a negative return in September, it was significantly less than that of the broader North American indices. Throughout September we continued to maintain a relatively defensive position in the portfolio. Although this did not allow us to escape the month unscathed, losses were contained due to our high cash position, stop loss discipline and lack of any leverage. We continue to focus on preservation of capital first and foremost, in these turbulent markets.

During September our small cap materials and energy holdings were particularly hard hit as commodities in general corrected sharply and led indices lower. As the month progressed however, several of our stop losses were hit and as such, we enter October with low weightings in these sectors. Partially offsetting the declines in our materials and energy holdings were several short positions in financial and consumer discretionary stocks. As we enter October, we have a large cash position (~60%), and a significantly reduced equity position. Our short positions continue to be concentrated in financial services (which continue to be under pressure) and select higher end consumer discretionary names.

Obviously 2011 has to this point proven to be a very difficult year for equity markets. Despite being able to find many stocks with very attractive fundamental characteristics, markets are being dominated by macro concerns. This has translated into increased market volatility where 300-400 point moves in the market have become common place. This has made stock picking very difficult as all sectors and stocks, for the most part, are moving in unison in anticipation or reaction to news. Although our lack of positive performance in 2011 does not sit well with us, we are pleased that our process has continued to increase our cash weighting which has led us to outperform the market in the short term. We continue to execute our investment process and point to the fact that since inception we have produced a positive absolute return in very difficult markets while the S&P/TSX SmallCap Index has declined 9.65% over the same time period.

Despite difficult equity markets globally, we would like to remind you that these periods are when the most attractive opportunities present themselves. Although we currently maintain a high cash position, we are increasingly of the view that the potential for significant returns from these market levels is high. As our process begins to indicate a more stable market environment, we will look to deploy this cash to take advantage of the many attractive situations that are presenting themselves. At Rival, we have always viewed our size and ability to move quickly as one of our key competitive advantages. We fully anticipate taking advantage of this when our macro models indicate a more positive environment for global equity markets.

Thank you for your continued support.

Tony and Jim
